In 1930 the D.F. submitted proposals for effecting monsoon repairs to the Malpe Fish curing yard at a cost of over Rs. 650. This year he has again submitted similar proposals at about the same cost. It is not clear why the Director should spend so much amount on repairs every year and why arrange-ments should not be made to build the yard with stronger mzaterials. For orders whether the Dir. may be asked.

Dir of Fisheries would favour us with remarks as to the necessity for this annual charge and whether this could not be minimised

21.5.31

Fisheries Department.

Malpe I is the biggest of the West Coast fish curing yards and has five big thatched store sheds besides the combined shed which require thatching and monsoon protection every year. Besides this, cadjan thatties have to be provided for the staff quarters, kitchen and demonstration curing sheds for protection against monsoon weather. Hence the annual expenditure for monsoon repairs amounts high. The average annual expenditure on monsoon repairs for this yard has been Rs. 585 ever since this department took over the fish curing yards and this can be reduced to about Rs. 200 if pucca

tiled store sheds are constructed in the place of temporary thatched ones, thus eliminating the re-thatching of the roof annually. | 5
